FuturDome - via Paisiello 6, Milan

t-space takes part in OUTER SPACE with the exhibition Homesick in the spaces of FuturDome.

Starting on March 27 and up to April 15 2017, comprehending Miart week, t-space will inhabit one of the apartments of the liberty building situated in via Paisiello 6 with a new project, curated by t-space Project Elena D'Angelo, Gloria Paolini, Alberta Romano..

Homesick is an adjective associated with the nostalgic feeling felt when away from the place where we belong. Its diction is not limited to the architectonic concept of house, but expanded to whatever we feel to be home. Sick is, on the other hand, the indicator of an illness, the feeling of emptiness generated from the distance between us and what we find familiar.

The projection of this absence can be transferred to any being capable of hosting a part of our emotional luggage, the sentiment tied to any "other" that is carrying a part of us. Within the characteristics of Futurdome we recognize the architectonic structure of an aptmnt not yet filled with familiarity. It becomes the shell in which this absence is rebuilt.

The transposition of an emotional structure in five contexts that exist outside the self, ties the works of Jack Fisher (1991, Merseyside, UK), Ludovica Gioscia (1977, Rome), Jacopo Miliani (1979, Florence), Giulio Scalisi (1992, Salemi), Laura Yuile (1986, Glasgow, UK) offering different interpretations of what is private and its relation to reality.

T is a space caught into another space, a place for exhibitions that walked into a photo studio; or maybe a space of photographers which is looking for a path in the milanese art scene. T is a symbiotic relationship. Artists and curators share their thoughts and their space, practice feeds theory, theory strengthens practice. T is our autonomy, the responsibility given by our choices. T is t-space.
